Governance is a decision-making process that gets more people and stakeholders involved. The aim is to come up with common good decisions that satisfy the majority. Inclusive governance, through citizens' involvement, favours the overall acceptance and makes implementation easier.

TAKE ACTION FOR THE FUTURE
BEING A RESPONSIBLE EU CITIZEN

INCLUSIVE GOVERNANCE

COMPREHENSIVE GOVERNANCE
Taking all dimensions into account promotes the emergence of multiple stakeholders and multi-level governance that is better able to take on challenges.

INCLUSIVE EUROPE
At European level, all citizens can participate in governance, for example by standing for election for the European Parliament or submitting petitions to the EU institutions.

PARTICIPATORY GOVERNANCE
The involvement of citizens enables governance to gain greater acceptance and tackle new issues. In order to reach the most satisfactory decision, a three-step decision-making process can be implemented:
- Information: informing citizens
- Consultation: asking their opinion on an issue
- Dialogue: Based on the results of the consultation, dialogue can be initiated to take the most satisfactory decision for everybody.

MULTI-LEVEL GOVERNANCE
Citizens can get involved at every level of governance to make the world they want to see a reality.

AT THE HIGHEST LEVEL
At international level, politicians try to combine the will of the citizens and global challenges.
