Hopes for 2024

Séamus BOLAND (IE)
President, Civil Society Organisations’ Group

And so we begin the new year of 2024, hoping for something better than 2023, especially in a time when bellicosity seems to be strengthening rather than diminishing. 2024 also heralds the start of the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union. The six priorities outlined by the Belgian government that will underpin their presidential intentions are: Defending the rule of law, democracy and unity; Strengthening our competitiveness; Pursuing a green and just transition; Re-enforcing our social and health agenda; Protecting people and borders; and Promoting a global Europe.

From the perspective of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group of the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC), it is welcome to read that the Belgian Presidency will focus on greater inclusion of citizens in the EU; an inclusion that centres around respecting fundamental rights in an atmosphere of equality, non-discrimination and citizens’ wellbeing. In a world where many citizens are being attracted by the extremes of political thoughts, this is extremely necessary. This is also one of the reasons why the Civil Society Organisations’ Group will continue to strongly support greater inclusion of civil society organisations in the making and implementing of policy in 2024. In regard to democratic participation, it is also worth remembering the following quote from Jacques Delors, who sadly passed away on 27 December 2023:

‘This weakening is worsened by the widening distance between the governed and their governments.’

What is not specifically mentioned in the priorities of the Belgian Presidency are the ongoing wars in the EU’s vicinity, which will affect its daily business. In the Middle East, the brutality meted out by all sides, especially towards children, breaks all known rules of war and beggs the anguish question: Why have we lost all sense of humanity? The great hope of a peaceful world that arose from the Second World War cry ‘never again’ seems a distant historical idea that is no longer part of modern thinking. Of course, the Middle East has, for now, put the illegal invasion of Ukraine on the back seat.

The EU has strongly supported Ukraine’s right to protect its sovereignty and is now engaged in a process of fast-forwarding the EU’s enlargement. During my recent visit to Ukraine, I learned about the fears of Ukrainian civil society organisations of losing out on the many freedoms gained as an independent nation. For this reason also, this war needs to stop.

In relation to EU enlargement, I am glad to announce that on 4 January, the EESC launched a call for expression of interest to civil society representatives from the EU candidate countries to become Enlargement Candidate Members (ECONS) and contribute to the Committee’s advisory work. With this new initiative, the Committee will gradually involve civil society representatives from the candidate countries in its daily work, promoting civil society’s role in the enlargement process before accession.

Meanwhile, 2024 in the EU is the year of elections to the European Parliament. The power currently enjoyed by the Parliament should not be underestimated. Therefore, the idea that voters will not take these elections seriously is extremely dangerous. Our vote for Members of the European Parliament will determine the co-legislator of the European Union. More importantly, it will determine how European citizens are represented in the following five years. Let’s not forget that climate change and environmental protection are still major issues, not to mention the fact that we still need to focus on legislation on health, education and fundamental rights, including the fight against poverty.

I attended the European Congress of Young Farmers on 6 December 2023. As in all youth organisations, it is sobering to realise that they are advocating for a time when we have succeeded in achieving our goals on climate change and farming. They demand a dramatic increase in resources aimed at using research to inform on best farming practices in a new world. As a former member of the Irish Young Farmers, I was reminded of how things have not changed, like the debate on reducing the average age of farmers. Currently it is 51.4 years, not much lower than when I was involved.

Finally, I would like to wish all Members of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group and readers of our bulletin all the best for 2024. This year our motto will continue to be: Let’s make a difference.

Séamus Boland

2 The civil society organisations from EU candidate countries, who fulfil the eligibility criteria, can submit their applications until 25 January at: https://ec.europa.eu/odr/2023
5 European Congress of Young Farmers, https://euyoungfarmers.eu/
BELGIAN PRESIDENCY OF THE COUNCIL OF THE EU: A LOOK AHEAD

Charting a vision: The Belgian Presidency’s blueprint for the future European social agenda

Alain COEUR (BE)
Director, European and International Affairs, National Union of Socialist Mutual Health Funds (UNMS)

Alain Coheur © EESC

Seen through the lens of the EESC’s Civil Society Organisations’ Group, the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union¹ will focus on some very social issues, which we hope will be able to influence the next legislature in both the European Parliament and the European Commission. As well as the ongoing legislative work, such as that related to the platform work directive², the regulation on the coordination of social security systems³, and the introduction of a European disability card⁴, there will also be legislative work on economic governance and social imbalances.

A joint EPSCO-ECOFIN Council meeting (to be held in Brussels in March 2024) will look in particular at the issue of social investment and ensuring that it is properly taken into account in the revision of the economic governance framework.

On 20 March 2024, a tripartite social summit⁵ jointly organised with the European Commission will be held at Val Duchesse, almost 40 years after Jacques Delors convened the meeting that gave rise to European social dialogue. The summit will aim to discuss the challenges facing our labour markets, workers and businesses, in particular: skills shortages, labour shortages and artificial intelligence.

A high-level conference⁶ on the European Pillar of Social Rights⁷ taking place in La Hulpe on 15-16 April should culminate in a “La Hulpe Interinstitutional Declaration”. The presidency’s programme also includes a conference on The Social Economy at the Core of Transitions⁸ to be held on 12-13 February, which will be coupled with a meeting of ministers responsible for the social economy that should lead to a roadmap for the future of the social economy.

On the occasion of the Belgian Presidency, the EESC’s Civil Society Organisations’ Group will host a conference addressing the state of health in Europe on 4-5 June in Liège.

By taking this action, the Belgian Presidency and the EESC would like to be able to provide an outline for the European social agenda of the future.

Competitiveness should be the guiding principle of the Belgian Presidency

Luc HENDRICKX (BE)
Former Director, SMEunited

Luc Hendrickx © EU

As the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union¹ will be the bridge to the next legislative term, it has a decisive role to play in the direction the EU takes in the coming years in the field of SME policy².

The current term saw the introduction of an avalanche of new rules, in particular for the digital and green transition. Now that this framework is in place, it has to be ensured that the 2024-2029 term and Strategic Agenda focus on the correct implementation of these new rules, while supporting SMEs to adapt their business processes and business models.

This should certainly be taken into account at the La Hulpe Summit, which should build on social dialogue - the underpinning driver for developing well-balanced solutions. It is crucial to fully involve the social partners in labour and social protection policies at all levels, while respecting their autonomy and the subsidiarity principle.

Competitiveness should always be the cross-cutting theme woven through social and climate policy. It has to be supported by an SME test for every proposal and all policy options based on the Think Small First³ and Once Only⁴ principles, and genuine action must be taken in response to the results.

We expect the Belgian Presidency to deliver an action plan with specific steps and proposals in order to achieve rapidly the promised 25% reduction in reporting requirements. This should include recognition of the Voluntary Sustainability Reporting Standard for SMEs as a safe harbour, shield and information limit.

² Policy for small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs)
⁵ Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council
⁶ Economic and Financial Affairs Council
⁷ Consilium, Tripartite Social Summit, https://europa.eu/!rFx6wx
⁹ Consilium, European Disability Card, https://europa.eu/!Cj8ByX
¹⁰ European Commission, EU social security coordination, https://europa.eu/!gQ34pX
The Belgian Presidency should ensure that the EU delivers a well-functioning Single Market without unnecessary internal barriers, by focusing more closely on enforcement of existing rules before creating new ones.

It is equally important to enforce respect for competition rules and measures on global dominant operators to guarantee a level playing field for SMEs operating in unbalanced business contexts. In this respect, the presidency should enable the late payment proposal to be adopted swiftly.

Placing the survival of family farming back at the heart of European policy

Marianne STREEL
President, Walloon Federation of Agriculture (FWA)

The months ahead will be particularly crucial for the maintenance and survival of our family farming model. The issues facing the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union will obviously include the matter of controlling the environmental impact of agricultural activities even more effectively, through the necessary reduction of either pesticides or greenhouse gas emissions.

However, the most important issue will first and foremost be to ensure our food self-sufficiency. Recent geopolitical events have shown us that the comfort on which our society has relied until today is entirely relative and could be shattered if we do not make the right choices and reflect horizontally, with thorough impact assessment research, before taking decisions.

All over Europe, the farming world is suffering and struggling to find youngsters willing to take over businesses. Our wish for this presidency is to reflect on this issue, which must be incorporated into the overall strategy for agriculture. This strategy should also include sufficient incentives for the development of agricultural research and innovation. Both can help with the implementation and achievement of our strategic sustainability objectives - so that Walloon agriculture grows a little more sustainable every day.

Moving forward with courage and strength

Christian MOOS (DE)
President, EESC EU-Transatlantic Relations Follow-Up Committee Divisional Director, European and International Affairs, German Civil Servants Association (dbb)

Much is at stake during the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union. Individual Member States are disregarding Europe’s values with increasing assertiveness. Dictators are threatening Europe’s freedom from inside and out. Where decisive action is needed, individual EU governments are abusing the existing rules to hold the community ransom or, even worse, to please Russia. So Europe can no longer afford to have players wielding their veto. Clearer still is that the wheat must be separated from the chaff. Enhanced cooperation between liberal European democracies is the order of the day.

In November 2023, the European Parliament adopted proposals for landmark reform of the European Union. MEPs have therefore taken onboard the recommendations of the Conference on the Future of Europe, in which the EESC played an active role. At the same time, populists and extremists, especially from the far right, are stirring up anti-European sentiment. “This EU must die”, says a leading German right-winger, whose party hopes to do well in the European elections. These attempts to intimidate must be firmly resisted.

No, the EU must live, and live it will. Those who want to respect Europe’s values and promote...
Europe’s unity in diversity will stand up to negative forces. They will not be a rabbit caught in the headlights. They continue to represent the majority in Europe and will draw on this strength. Those who stand for authoritarianism, chauvinism and nationalism must be isolated and, if necessary, left behind.

The pro-European parties have strong allies in European civil society. The European social partners are unequivocally committed to Europe. Alongside organised civil society, they defend liberal democracy and the idea of European sovereignty. The latter is based on a capacity to act and solidarity.

With civil society engagement and participatory democracy, European democracy can withstand infiltration by reactionary forces and the threat posed by aggressive third countries. European democracy must be able to defend itself and will prove it can do so. It is therefore high time for a European dialogue of organised civil society, providing an effective bulwark against the enemies of democracy.

The green transition hinges on the East

Corina Murafa

In our Union, the success of the green transition will be predicated on the willingness of the most vulnerable to embrace this vision. We are talking here not only about vulnerable citizens or regions, but also Member States with less developed democracies, education systems, and social and civic dialogue frameworks. Yes, you guessed it.

The green energy transition package must deliver on its promises first and foremost in Central and Eastern Europe, and the Belgian Presidency of the Council of the European Union must help achieve this.

---

---

Belgium holds the Presidency of the Council of the European Union in the first half of 2024, from 1 January to 30 June. Here are the six priorities of the Belgian Presidency for this semester:

- Defending rule of law, democracy, and unity
- Strengthening our competitiveness
- Pursuing a green and just transition
- Reinforcing our social and health agenda
- Protecting people and borders
- Promoting a global Europe

For more information visit the website of the Belgian Presidency at: https://belgian-presidency.consilium.europa.eu/en/
How Belgium can drive the debate on Europe’s green future

Danny Jacobs © Bond Beter Leefmilieu

Danny JACOBS
Director, Union for a Better Environment

Benjamin Clarysse © Bond Beter Leefmilieu

Benjamin CLARYSSE
Policy Coordinator, Union for a Better Environment

On 1 January Belgium took over the Presidency of the Council of the European Union. For six months our country will be able to take a leading role in European debates. But can it also shake its reputation for lagging behind on climate and the environment and become a proactive European leader?

Belgium has often remained on the sidelines in recent years, abstaining in European Council votes. The Social Climate Fund, the Nature Restoration Law and the renewed authorisation of glyphosate are just a few examples of issues on which Belgium has remained passive. However, we could see Belgium become more visible in the first half of 2024.

The Belgian Presidency comes at a busy time. The European legislative term ends in October 2024. Many files from the Fit for 55 package still need to be finalised in these last stages and it is up to our government to reach strong agreements under this time pressure. With the spotlight on our federal government, we hope that they will put their best foot forward and that Flanders does not throw a spanner in the works. One of the most prominent matters at the top of the list is the implementation of the Chemicals Strategy for Sustainability, which includes microplastics and PFAS pollution. In this case Flanders and the federal government seem to be on the same page.

Perhaps what is even more important is the role Belgium has in guiding the next European Commission agenda and raising the bar: What comes after the European Green Deal? With war at our borders, high energy prices, fierce competition with China and the US, EU enlargement to new Member States on the cards and with migration as a political ‘hot potato’, the EU is under great pressure on all fronts. Geopolitical developments will determine the direction we will take over the next five years, and the climate and environment agenda must not be watered down as a result of all these additional challenges. Preparing the stage for the next European legislative term therefore calls not only for diplomatic skills but also for robust political efforts.

For example, Belgium should launch discussions on the European climate objectives for 2040 and facilitate the debate on the critical role of nature, ecosystems and nature-based solutions. Our country should also establish the outline of a European circular economy. Finally, the just transition is also on our wish list: how do we make the transition towards climate neutrality without leaving anyone behind?

Hopefully our country will take up the challenge and put its best foot forward as of 1 January.

1 Union for a Better Environment (Bond Beter Leefmilieu) unites nature and environmental organisations and strengthens the voice of sustainable frontrunners in Flanders, one of the regions of Belgium. https://www.bondbeterleefmilieu.be/
6 European Commission, Fit for 55 package. https://europa.eu/!0WkrW
7 European Commission, chemical strategy. https://europa.eu/!FhR8gd
8 PFAS: Perfluoroalkyl and Polyfluoroalkyl Substances
9 European Commission, The European Green Deal. https://europa.eu/!Bh4h
COMMENTS ON CURRENT AFFAIRS

New consumption environments challenge us all – European Consumer Day 2023 emphasises need for effective enforcement and protection of children in digital world

The European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) has emphasised the need for cooperation between the different actors in marketing, including researchers. The role of social media in an understandable and age-appropriate format is crucial. The panellists’ views on the need for further action to safeguard children’s rights, e.g. in the form of legislation, differed considerably, although all stressed the importance of effective debate and the reconciliation of different perspectives.

The discussions at the European Consumer Day 2023 were very topical and thought-provoking. The organisation of an annual consumer-focused event by the European Economic and Social Committee is important and a tradition that should be maintained. Special thanks are due to the EESC’s secretariat for organising the day and gathering interesting topics and speakers.

COP28: In the face of scientific reality, great promises must give way to climate justice and translate into action

At the moment the agreement only covers the energy system, forgets the need for emissions to have peaked before 2025 and lacks precision on how it will be financed. Safeguards are needed around this transition away from fossil fuels seems very fragile.

At the moment the agreement only covers the energy system, forgets the need for emissions to have peaked before 2025 and lacks precision on how it will be financed. Safeguards are needed around this transition away from fossil fuels seems very fragile.

The agreement of the countries’ represented in Dubai on the transition away from fossil fuels seems very fragile.

At the moment the agreement only covers the energy system, forgets the need for emissions to have peaked before 2025 and lacks precision on how it will be financed. Safeguards are needed around this transition away from fossil fuels seems very fragile.

Arnaud Schwartz, Vice-President, France Nature Environment

Alongside civil society from around the world, the delegation of the European Economic and Social Committee of which I was a part, collectively managed, before and during the United Nations Climate Change Conference COP28, to stress the urgent need to move away from fossil fuels. However, the agreement of the countries’ represented in Dubai on the transition away from fossil fuels seems very fragile.

At the moment the agreement only covers the energy system, forgets the need for emissions to have peaked before 2025 and lacks precision on how it will be financed and the responsibility of historical polluters towards the most vulnerable. In addition, gas, fossil fuel, is presented here as a transitional energy and carbon capture and storage (CCS) as well as nuclear technology, which are expensive and potentially dangerous, are also included in the final text.

We would point out that island states are worried about the introduction of carbon capture technologies, as they could lead to actions that undermine their efforts to reduce emissions. Safeguards are needed around this language.

However, at the end of this COP we can welcome the desire to triple the production of renewable energies and to double energy efficiency by 2030.

Is the announcement of the Loss and
The rapid activation of the Loss and Damage Fund is a step forward. At around USD 700 million, however, it remains extremely underfunded in the face of climate impacts, which could be as high as USD 580 billion per year by 2030 in countries that are least responsible for it.

Even worse, adaptation – a real life or death situation for the most vulnerable populations – remains severely underfunded, as needs could amount to USD 387 billion per year by 2030. COP28 is still unclear on how to bridge the gap and is content simply to ask for a report from “developed countries” by the next COP on doubling financing for adaptation, in order to reach USD 40 billion per year by 2025.

During this COP, the framework for carbon markets was heavily debated and the related texts ultimately rejected, as they could have undermined the integrity of the Paris Agreement. But be warned – it will be discussed again in Baku at COP29.

Similarly, greater advancement on the more general issue of financing the energy transition, in particular from rich countries for the poorest and most affected by climate change, will need to be made in 2024. Otherwise, we’re in for a major stalemate in the negotiations in Azerbaijan, with a collective failure to meet the 1.5°C objective at its heart.

So, what now?

COP28 concluded with announcements about gradually diverting investment away from fossil fuels. However, it remains more necessary than ever to keep up the pressure on public and private decision-makers to assume their responsibilities and invest the billions needed for fair transition and adaptation.

Today, without the COP, we would be facing a 4°C temperature increase. With current policies, we are heading towards an increase of 2.1-2.8°C, but science constantly tells us that the risks of exceeding 1.5°C are unpredictable or even deadly for our species. So let’s continue the dialogue between peoples and our individual and collective actions at all levels, so that humanity can respect the planetary boundaries and all other living things.

---

Civil society and elections: winning the hearts and minds of European voters?

Katrīna Leitāne © EESC

The 2023 Connecting EU seminar focused on the 2024 European elections, which will certainly have a strong impact on the course of the EU over the next five years. “Europe is not them. Europe is us!”, emphasised the EESC President Oliver Röpke. It is crucial to keep the focus on people’s concerns and to provide platforms for our citizens to speak and to make their voice heard. Furthermore, freedom to choose and to vote should never be underestimated and democracy cannot be taken for granted. Mobilising civil society organisations could help ensure a high turnout, against a backdrop of democratic backsliding in several Member States and a loss of faith in democratic institutions affecting all countries.

The seminar focused on three aspects. Firstly, the impact of disinformation on the 2024 European elections. Artificial intelligence could have a huge influence on communication by disseminating disinformation narratives about the electoral process in the EU. Strong multi-stakeholder cooperation and much greater collaboration is needed in order to deal with this.

Secondly, the role of civil society in consolidating values of solidarity and standing up for democracy. A gap between expectations and opinions exists. It is necessary to look at each country individually and political discourse in each country needs to be taken into account in the context of the European elections.

Thirdly, the mobilisation of young people. It is necessary to acknowledge that young people have changed how they participate, now preferring non-institutionalised forms of political engagement, and must be given the tools to navigate a political sphere that fails to listen and fails to reflect their understanding of politics. If you don’t vote, you live in someone else’s democracy; young people need to be educated and equipped with the necessary skills and competences.
REFLECTIONS

Enhancing Youth Engagement: the role of ERYICA’s “Walk the Talk” initiative in the next European Elections

Tanja HERCEG
Board Member, ERYICA

In the run up to the European elections, over 400 million EU citizens face a critical choice in electing 720 Members of the European Parliament (MEPs) who will represent them for the next five years. These elections are set to significantly impact the daily lives of Europeans, emphasizing that the power of democracy lies in the hands of the voters. Notably, about 16% of voters, who have the right to vote and shape our future, are young people aged between 16 and 30 years old, underlining the significance of youth turnout and the need to be well-informed and engaged in the democratic process.

To foster informed youth participation, the European Youth Information and Counselling Agency (ERYICA) has launched “Walk the Talk,” an EU funded initiative aimed at informing young people in a youth-friendly manner about the EU, their voting rights and the significance of elections in a manner that puts young people at the centre. At a time where disinformation threatens democratic integrity and trust in institutions, “Walk the Talk” plays a critical role in boosting voter turnout, especially among those new to voting, who may not yet fully grasp the EU’s impact on their lives and the importance of their electoral involvement.

“Walk the Talk” explores the impact of the EU on everyday life through nine key priorities identified by youth information workers: climate change, human rights, mental health, affordable housing, a fair economy, accessible education, full employment, security and safety, and better local opportunities. The walkthetalkeu.com Web Hub, available in 13 languages so far, serves as a unique platform that aggregates diverse political perspectives on these key issues, facilitating comparison and analysis. The initiative features interviews with MEPs across various political parties, forming part of a broader social media campaign. This initiative seeks to narrow the gap between young voters and policymakers by addressing youth concerns and combating electoral disinformation. Walkthetalkeu.com is central to this effort, particularly focusing on first-time voters.

However, the current underrepresentation of young people in the European Parliament, with only 7% of MEPs aged 18-35, despite representing 20% of the EU’s population, highlights the need for more advocates for youth issues. This importance is further highlighted by the Eurobarometer, which shows a 6% increase in youth interest the year before the elections, compared to 2018, with youth interest at 49%. This indicates a growing awareness among young people of the significant role they play in the EU’s future. The “Walk the Talk” initiative is instrumental in this shift, empowering young voices and countering disinformation.

Looking ahead, there is a strong call for future MEPs to recognise the significance of youth work, youth information and the pivotal role of young people in shaping the future of the EU. It is crucial for MEPs to actively advocate for the needs and interests of young people, upholding the principle: Nothing about young people without young people.

1 ERYICA, the European Youth Information and Counselling Agency, is an independent organisation composed of national and regional youth information coordinating bodies and networks; https://www.eryica.org/
3 ERYICA, https://www.eryica.org/

NEWS FROM THE GROUP

Liberal Professions Category discussing the future of EU health policy

On 22 November 2023, the EESC’s Liberal Professions Category held its third and final meeting of the year, chaired by spokesperson Rudolf Kolbe. The meeting focused on the EU’s health policy and the liberal professions’ role in this regard, and had three sessions.

During the first session, Franz Ferrari from the Austrian Chamber of Pharmacists spoke about the EU’s strategic autonomy in the field of pharmaceutical products – or lack thereof. He explained that medicine shortages affect all Member States and can lead to serious public health risks. Europe and its Member States must step up and take action in order to avoid serious supply chain issues in the future.

The second session of the day focused on ways to professionalise the public health workforce. Katarzyna Czabanowska, Professor of Public Health Leadership and Workforce Development at Maastricht University, said that emphasis should be placed on taxonomy, competencies, education and training. She invited EESC Members to put the public health workforce on the EU agenda to drive it forwards.

The final session focused on mental health. Dr Denis Vella Baldacchino, Maltese Mental Health Commissioner, explained that mental health is often neglected. Young people are particularly affected and unlikely to ask for help. He proposed a multi-stakeholder approach that promotes wellbeing, prevention of mental health diseases, therapeutic rehabilitation and reintegration and research. He concluded by highlighting the importance of prevention and recommended lowering stress levels in the workplace and lifestyle changes.

1 EESC, Liberal Professions’ Category, https://europa.eu/!h07iwg
HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE LAST EESC PLENARY SESSION

COP28: The beginning of the end of the fossil fuel era?

During its December plenary session, the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) held a debate on the Global climate commitments: reflecting on the outcomes of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) COP281, with the participation of Sandrine Dixson-Declève, Co-President of The Club of Rome2 and Diandra Ni Bhuachalla, EESC Youth Delegate COP283.

Several Members of the EESC Civil Society Organisations’ Group (CSO Group) took the floor, including Arnaud Schwartz, who attended COP28 with the EESC delegation. He thanked the European Commission for including the EESC’s priorities of sustainable nutrition and just transition in the European negotiators’ mandates. In response to the speakers, he emphasised that: “Whatever your view you need to continue to negotiate. You get nowhere with violence”.

Neža Repanšek, who also participated in COP28, said that the global stocktake of the conference is a blaring emergency siren, urgent and demanding attention, yet the response does not match the urgency. Even after three decades, the process avoids confronting the real heart of the issue. The conclusions of COP28 were not historical, but “lost in intentional vagueness”. She concluded by stressing that the EESC has to demand substantial action and not accept “hollow promises”.

Juraj Sipko took the opportunity to ask the important question: “Who will finance this huge cost that will be caused by climate change?” Lutz Ribbe recalled the COP16 and the outrage when the President of Bolivia walked out in protest because the negotiations were neither comprehensive nor in the interests of developing countries. Ireland sent a similar message at this year’s COP. He stressed that: “what we are calling for and the reality are not in line”.

“We are not rising up to the standards we have set for ourselves,” said Corina Murafa, the newest Member of the CSO Group. Member States are taking decisions that are contrary to the deadlines for phasing out coal and reaching carbon neutrality. She called on the EU to hold Member States accountable.

Kęstutis Kupšys steered the debate towards the issue of sufficiency. He pointed out that if Europe had not relocated its industry to China, the emissions figures would be different.

Cooperation with the EESC and other European institutions instrumental for the success of Spanish Presidency

At its last plenary session of the year, the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) took stock of the work carried out by the Spanish Presidency of the Council of the European Union1 in the second semester of 2023 and addressed future challenges for Europe.

Spain’s First Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Economy and Digitalisation, Nadia Calviño, summarised the conclusions of the Spanish Presidency in a debate with EESC Members, mentioning, among other things, the reform of the electricity market and deepening the Economic and Monetary Union. She said that cooperation with European institutions, and in particular with the EESC, had been instrumental for the success of the busy semester. “My presence shows the strong commitment of the Spanish government to the social partners, social dialogue and civil society. We try to listen carefully and integrate the opinion of civil society into our work”.

EESC President Oliver Röpke thanked the Spanish Presidency for its invaluable commitment to advancing the European agenda, emphasising the EESC’s gratitude for the inclusive and comprehensive approach taken by the presidency.

Following the Deputy Prime Minister’s statement, several Members of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group took the floor. Séamus Boland, President of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group, congratulated the Deputy Prime Minister on a very successful presidency and on her appointment as President of the European Investment Bank – a duty that she is expected to take up on 1 January 2024.

3 EESC, EESC Youth Delegate COP28, https://europa.eu/!ttB9jH

1, 2, 3 Joint Sebastian Dezio, © EESC

Sandrine Dixson-Declève © EESC

“We are uncertain whether we will stay within our 1.5 degree target. The influence of the petro-states is clearly evident in the half-measures and loopholes in the final agreement. The final COP 28 text is also extremely weak on how countries will actually pay for the measures and loopholes in the final agreement. Our 1.5 degree target. The influence of the petro-states is clearly evident in the half-measures and loopholes in the final agreement. The final COP 28 text is also extremely weak on how countries will actually pay for the measures and loopholes in the final agreement. Our 1.5 degree target. The influence of the petro-states is clearly evident in the half-measures and loopholes in the final agreement. The final COP 28 text is also extremely weak on how countries will actually pay for the measures and loopholes in the final agreement.

Cooperation with the EESC and other European institutions instrumental for the success of Spanish Presidency

At its last plenary session of the year, the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) took stock of the work carried out by the Spanish Presidency of the Council of the European Union1 in the second semester of 2023 and addressed future challenges for Europe.

Spain’s First Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Economy and Digitalisation, Nadia Calviño, summarised the conclusions of the Spanish Presidency in a debate with EESC Members, mentioning, among other things, the reform of the electricity market and deepening the Economic and Monetary Union. She said that cooperation with European institutions, and in particular with the EESC, had been instrumental for the success of the busy semester. “My presence shows the strong commitment of the Spanish government to the social partners, social dialogue and civil society. We try to listen carefully and integrate the opinion of civil society into our work”.

EESC President Oliver Röpke thanked the Spanish Presidency for its invaluable commitment to advancing the European agenda, emphasising the EESC’s gratitude for the inclusive and comprehensive approach taken by the presidency.

Following the Deputy Prime Minister’s statement, several Members of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group took the floor. Séamus Boland, President of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group, congratulated the Deputy Prime Minister on a very successful presidency and on her appointment as President of the European Investment Bank – a duty that she is expected to take up on 1 January 2024.

Mr Boland further commented on two interrelated priorities of the Spanish Presidency: progress on the green transition and promoting greater social and economic justice. In order to sustain continued public support for the green transition, Mr Boland highlighted continued support for bottom-up approaches, citizen participation and partnership as essential elements, stating that this would entail “nudging a critical mass of consumers to embrace more sustainable lifestyles”. He also pointed to a new EESC study on The cost of climate change on households and families in the EU, which had been requested by his Group.

Giuseppe Guerini, co-spokesperson of the EESC’s Social Economy Category, welcomed the adoption of the Council recommendation on promoting enabling frameworks for the social economy, which aims to support the social economy’s role in fostering social inclusion and access to the job market. Mr Guerini asked for the role and values of the social economy to be recognised in economic policy, stating that “the social economy and its values need to be part of the new economic governance of the EU”, adding that in economic governance, it should be recognised that there is no stability without solidarity.

Luca Jahier, President of the EESC’s European Semester Group, recognised that the file on reforming the economic governance framework was one of the most complex files anyone could be responsible for. He expressed his disappointment in the direction that the discussions had taken, but hoped for a Council agreement before the end of 2023. In the light of the difficult negotiations surrounding the Multiannual Financial Framework, he hoped for a strong European Investment Bank under Calviño’s leadership: “For the investment needed in Europe, the only hope we have is to have a very strong European Investment Bank which will provide us with the funding”.

Jan Andersson addressed the situation for older people, stating that “demographic development is not a threat, it is an opportunity. Young people and older people can contribute to developing our society through the work carried out in civil society organisations”. Mr Andersson called for pension systems that enable pensioners to have a decent life. He also called for enhanced healthcare for older people in order to ensure that seniors have a full and qualitative life.

Baiba Miltoviča, President of the EESC’s TEN Section, pointed to the Committee’s conference on Rare diseases and the European Reference Networks that took place during the Spanish Presidency. Ms Miltoviča said that the conference had given more visibility to rare diseases and that the Committee planned to continue its work on this issue. The upcoming Belgian and Hungarian presidencies wanted to bring the topic forward, and the European Commission invited the Committee to further cooperate on the issue, which was very welcome.

EESC 65th anniversary: the voice of a strong civil society is now more important than ever

At its plenary session on 13 December 2023, the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) held a debate on the “Celebration of the 65th anniversary of the EESC: Empowering Civil Society, Defending Democracy”. “Over the past 65 years, the Committee has built a true platform for civil society to freely express its views to improve EU legislation. In the changing geopolitical context, the voice of a strong and independent civil society is now more important than ever. It is civil society, in its role as watchdog, who makes sure nobody switches off the checks and balances, the rule of law or fundamental rights and values – so that nobody ‘unplugs democracy’, said EESC President Olivier Röpke.

As highlighted during the debate, the EESC was an integral part of the Conference on the Future of Europe, whose final recommendations explicitly mentioned the Committee as an instrument for increasing participation and transparency in EU democracy. Recent examples of the EESC’s pioneering role include being the first to call for a proper European Health Union and for an EU Blue Deal, and being at the forefront of the ban on programmed obsolescence, which culminated with the proposal of the “right to repair”.

Former presidents and secretary-generals of the EESC took the floor, as well as the three Group Presidents, Vasco Alves Cordeiro, President of the European Committee of the Regions, sent a video message.

Séamus Boland, President of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group, called for the EESC to be fully mobilised for the 2024 European elections. “The EU must bring collective problem-solving to common European challenges. Whether we achieve this will largely depend on the results of next year’s European Parliament elections. The EESC and its Members have a mandate and a responsibility to reach out to citizens through their networks of civil society organisations to address disinformation, fears and lack of trust. We must also reiterate our call for real measures to implement dialogue with civil society at EU level in all policy areas,” said Mr Boland.

Baiba Miltoviča, President of the EESC’s TEN Section, drew attention to the fact that participatory democracy, through an open, transparent and structured dialogue between the EU institutions and civil society, is becoming more and more important. The EESC has an important role to play in this dynamic, as it is the EU’s sole body at interinstitutional level, whose members and civil society organisations form a unique network that not only provides expertise but also helps validate and legitimise policy actions.

Krysztof Balon, Vice-President of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group, highlighted that since his appointment as an EESC Member in 2010, he has experienced an excellent culture of consensual discussions and decisions, allowing unity between different areas of interest and different Member States. “It is very important to take this culture of respect to our organisations, to our communities back home, to our Member States. This is the added value of the EESC and its Members,” he said.
OVERVIEW OF RECENT WORK

The last EESC plenary session took place on 13 and 14 December 2023. The EESC plenary adopted 32 opinions, of which twelve were drafted by Members of the Civil Society Organisations’ Group, and one resolution on the EESC’s support for the accession of Romania and Bulgaria to the Schengen area1. A list of the recent work can be found below.

Ákos TOPOLÁNSZKY (HU), co-rapporteur, SOC/768² For an EU framework for national homeless strategies based on the principle of “Housing First”

Arnaud SCHWARTZ (FR), rapporteur, NAT/905¹ Seeds and other plant and forest reproductive material

Benjamin RIZZO (MT), rapporteur, ECO/627¹ Faster and Safer Tax Excess Relief

Christian MOOS (DE), rapporteur, REX/571¹ Strengthening Multilateralism and core international principles for a rules-based order in a rapidly changing world – The importance of Civil Society contribution to the UN system

Doviľė JUODKAITĖ (LT), rapporteur, SOC/780³ Revision of the victims’ rights directive

Ioannis VARDAKASTANIS (EL), rapporteur, SOC/770⁴ The climate crisis and its effect on vulnerable groups

Ioannis VARDAKASTANIS (EL), rapporteur, ECO/612⁵ Main challenges faced by EU islands, and mountainous and sparsely populated areas

Ioannis VARDAKASTANIS (EL), rapporteur-general, SOC/785⁶ European Disability Card and the European Parking Card for persons with disabilities

João NABAIS (PT), rapporteur, INT/1038⁷ Open finance and payments

Pietro Vittorio BARBIERI (IT), rapporteur, SOC/779⁸ International protection of adults

Simo TIAINEN (FI), rapporteur, NAT/899⁹ The impact of high energy prices on the agricultural sector and rural areas

Tymoteusz Adam ZYCH (PL), rapporteur, INT/1014¹⁰ Revision of the toy safety directive

The complete texts of all EESC opinions are available in various language versions on the Committee’s website¹⁴.

The next EESC plenary session will take place on 14 and 15 February 2024. For more information on the upcoming plenary session please visit our website¹⁵.

A list including all new work appointments of Civil Society Organisations’ Group Members is available on the Committee’s website¹⁶.

¹ EESC resolution, https://europa.eu/!brgNGJ
² EESC opinion SOC/768, https://europa.eu/!XWmv83
³ EESC opinion NAT/905, https://europa.eu/!bhJ35b
⁴ EESC opinion ECO/627, https://europa.eu/!wY6dXf
⁵ EESC opinion REX/571, https://europa.eu/!JBQkYs
⁶ EESC opinion SOC/780, https://europa.eu/!uKvYs1
⁷ EESC opinion SOC/770, https://europa.eu/!jgjgCg
⁸ EESC opinion ECO/612, https://europa.eu/!HfDyW4
⁹ EESC opinion SOC/785, https://europa.eu/!FVdM6C
¹⁰ EESC opinion INT/1038, https://europa.eu/!YMxW4
¹¹ EESC opinion SOC/779, https://europa.eu/!FBBsY8
¹² EESC opinion NAT/899, https://europa.eu/!fRcCR4
¹³ EESC opinion INT/1014, https://europa.eu/!HsHPz7
¹⁴ EESC opinions, https://europa.eu/!bq4Djg
¹⁵ EESC plenary sessions, https://europa.eu/!KkCbIB
¹⁶ EESC, New work appointments, https://europa.eu/!Hf9j0k

UPCOMING EVENTS

31/01/2024 Meeting of the EESC’s Consumers and Environment Category

31/01/2024 Meeting of the EESC’s Farmers’ Category

© Robert Plociennik, Shutterstock

The EESC is not responsible for the content of external websites. The views expressed by individuals in this publication do not represent a position of the EESC or of the Civil Society organisations’ group.

© European Union, 2024 • Reproduction is authorised provided the source is acknowledged.

For any use or reproduction of the “photos” and “illustrations”, permission must be sought directly from the copyright holder(s).